Do you know what this year is? Our 40th wedding anniversary. Now when I say that, that sounds like a ridiculously long time. However, in reality, it is like Kenny Chesney's country song says, "Don't blink!" I think somewhere along the way, we blinked and here we are.

Not a lot of people know this story, but you are now going to become one of the privileged few.

I saw Denny at church one Sunday and decided right then and there, at that glance, that I was going to marry him. He was with his girlfriend that after some inquiring I was told was very serious. Ha!

I walked back home and told my mom I had just seen my husband. My mom asked a few questions and that was that. Keep in mind I was 14. Now as a parent, I'm sure she was thinking I had lost my mind.

I never forgot him and the universe kept lining things up for us to be in the same vicinity and suddenly we had mutual friends. He finally asked me out. I was 16. Only because our parents knew each other in "small town USA", was I allowed to go out with him. Fast forward two years, and we were married. Me, fresh out of high school and him, right out of college.

And as "they" say, "The rest is history". Who is this "they" anyway. They have an opinion on everything.

Who knows, it might not last, but forty years is a good run.
